N. Moore, The future demand for information professionals in Europe, Education for Information 16 (1998), 191–208.

The above paper was originally prepared as a background working paper for a Unesco meeting to plan the development of a curriculum for information professionals in the Asia-Pacific Region. It drew heavily on Nick Moore's then unpublished contribution to the Unesco World Information Report on the nature of information societies. The editors of Education for Information sought permission to publish the paper to give it wider circulation.

The eventual outcome of the Unesco meeting was the publication: A curriculum for an information society: educating and training information professionals in the Asia-Pacific Region, Unesco 1998.
