

Editorial

Dear Readers,

Thank you for taking the time to read the latest issue of Physiotherapy Practice and Research. This issue marks our first year as co-editors of the journal and what a year it's been!! We would also like to extend our gratitude to the authors of the manuscripts for their patience. Due to the global coronavirus pandemic we were unable to publish our June issue of Physiotherapy Practice and Research. We would also like to thank our clinical colleagues at Beaumont for their contribution to the editorial of this issue. It has been a trying year for healthcare workers across the globe and as an academic and clinical practitioner we wish to acknowledge the hard work of healthcare practitioners including our colleagues across the spectrum of disciplines, it is a testament to all of you that we are able to publish this issue of Physiotherapy Practice and Research.

This issue includes a wide variety of clinical issues that we believe are of interest and importance to physiotherapy including both professional and clinical issues. Thank you for reading Physiotherapy Practice and Research, we hope you enjoy this issue and future issues to come.

Editors-in-Chief
Dr Orlagh O'Shea
Dr Jonathan Moran